

Disposal of Difficult Wastes, Made Simple

Computers and television break or become unwanted. So do fluorescent light bulbs, microwave ovens, dehumidifiers, and a number of other items that shouldn't be thrown in the trash. Help protect the county's water resources, and think twice before you toss these items. Finding an environmentally safe disposal option for these and other hard-to-manage items doesn't have to be complicated if you know where to look. One good place to start is <http://calumet.uwex.edu> under the "hot topics" link, where lists of recycling options for each of the following items are included.

Appliances can often be recycled by a scrap metal recycler. However, there may be a fee for this service. Appliances that contain CFC's and Freon, such as dehumidifiers, air conditioners, and refrigerators, will require special handling to make sure the refrigerants are not released into the atmosphere. Mid-Shores Disposal in New Holstein and Outagamie County Solid Waste Dept. are two outlets for these items.

Electronics such as televisions and computers are banned from landfill disposal according to Wisconsin law. Free and low-cost year-round options for recycling these items include Best Buy retail locations. Calumet County also hosts a temporary low-cost option in the spring, typically in conjunction with the hazardous waste Clean Sweep events.

Fluorescent bulbs contain mercury, and should be properly disposed for recycling. Most times, disposal of the compact, curly, bulbs is free; there is usually a nominal fee to recycle the tube fluorescent light bulbs. Common outlets are Home Depot, Batteries Plus, and Bulbs Plus stores. Some local True Value and Ace Hardware stores will also accept them.

Hazardous wastes from home, farm and business: Calumet County hosts a temporary Clean Sweep collection event for hazardous wastes. Collection sites will be offered for hazardous waste disposal for all county residents, farms, and businesses. Specific times and locations will be announced early each year. Check <http://calumet.uwex.edu> website for more details.

Leftover medications: Calumet county residents can safely dispose of leftover medications at a permanent drop off box located at the Brillion Police Dept. during normal business hours or by appointment. Also drop off boxes are available at the Appleton Police Dept. or the Calumet County Sheriff's Dept. 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Hazardous Waste Collection Event: Tentatively set for Friday September 7th, 2018 . 9am-11am at Brillion Public Works Garage. Look for more information to come.
